FYI… The Holocaust survivor community in Las Vegas, NV: the COVID pandemic has caused everyone to adapt. A small group of volunteers worked to ensure that all the survivors who wanted the vaccines were able to get them. Since in-person meetings are not possible, monthly luncheons are sent to the survivors. All the survivors have had the opportunity to receive computer tablets (and service) so they can connect with the outside world more frequently. Every few weeks the survivors get together for Zoom meetings.

In Las Vegas, the survivor community has done well by working with community members to promote Holocaust education and remembrance. It is not a large or wealthy community, but by working with local educational institutions, as well as social service, law enforcement and governmental agencies, new and innovative methods of Holocaust education are being developed. One example is the post-Holocaust series of interviews conducted by volunteers and edited by students from the University of Nevada Las Vegas (UNLV) film department. That collection is housed at UNLV and the US Holocaust Memorial Museum. For more information contact genshoah@gmail.com.
